My informant, although one of those engaged in the movement, is unable to say whether they will be united on any particular candidate, the present bond of sym-pathy being the defeat of Grant's nomi-nation. It is possible—in truth, probable hat the movement may be utilized for Blaine. The leaders of that class of Republicans in this State are Blaine men, and will work for his nomination. It is even suspect ed that Bains is the head-center of the movement, and that he is organizing the old Greeley R publicaes throughout the country for his own use. The first public demonstration in this State will be an effort to secure the nomination of Ex Senator and Ex-Governor Reuben E. Featon for governor next year. If that is accomplished they exto control the delegamon from this State to the national convention. All this has the appearance of a revival in the resurrection busicess. From the statements of others in the building at the time, it appears that James came there shortly after eleven o'clock and inquired for Hinds. He appeared to be slightly intoxicested at the time, and when told that Hinds had gone down into the basement started after him. The two met at the bottom of the stairs, and James, stepping up to Hinds, said: "Well, are you going to settle that matter, or not?" To this Hinds replied, "I know nothing about it;" and James immediately drew his pistol and commenced to fire, the first ball striking Hinds in the head. The latter returned the fire, they being not more than five feet apart. A murderous duel at once began, James directing his aim at Hinds's head, while the latter aimed for his opponent's heart. Each had a Smith Wesson seven-shooter of the smallest size, and James continued to fire until every chamber was emptied, when he seized the barrel in his hand, and rushing upon Hinds, with whom James had clinched, was preparing to shoot him again in the head.
